Abel Escobedo, 31, a resident of Grand Prairie, Texas died August 12, 2016.

"Hijo mio, se que estas en un mejor lugar...que te encuentras en un lugar lleno de luz y amor. Yo te extrañare hijo mío pero no podría entregarte en tan buenas manos como las de Nuestro Padre Santo...ok ahora te has hido pero pronto estaremos juntos por siempre, Te Amo. Hay un dolor tan profundo en mi ser y en mi alma... le estaré agradeciendo a mi Padre Santo por aver me dado un hijo tan talentoso y tan amoroso... me duele en mi Alma verte partir...pronto estaremos juntos. 'MAS HAYA DEL SOL TENDREMOS UN HOGAR JUNTOS Y POR SIEMPRE VIVIREMOS..TE AMO HIJO MIO' "

“ Once upon a time this young boy and young girl met each other. As they began to share their stories they realized they were alike but different. They fell in love and would run away in the night together. Even though they knew the consequences, it was always worth it to them, the price to pay had no comparison to a time that was priceless. As time went on, 19 yrs to b exact, after failed marriages, they're soul would always cry out for each other. Even as adults, there could never b a price put on the time and love they had shared. Even when they loved each other from a distance and chose to be friends, there could never b any denial or comparison to that connection. Anyone around could feel the energy. Even as adults they still felt the need to runaway together, and as his body is laid to rest today, her heart hurts but she is very aware and familiar of the connection that made them inseparable and would always called them back. She knows she will take him wherever she goes and that he will protect her now in spirit. As he would write her, Songs of Solomon 6:3 I am my beloveds and my beloved is mine. I will love you forever Abel, I am so happy that you served the Lord n had even found a new relationship before you left this dimension, you had plenty to look forward to but the Lord was calling your name!! May you rest in peace and one day we will all join you in the light of the Lord to worship n praise his holy name
