“ Dear Alvin,

I've been trying to find the right words, and it's not easy. Ever since you've been gone, the apartments just don't feel the same. It's quieter now... like something is missing.

I want you to know that I saw your heart. No matter what, you were a sweet person, and your kindness always showed. We all fall short, but that never took away from the good in you.

I still laugh when I think about how we first had our little “run-ins”—nothing bad, just you being you. You actually called the cops on me, telling them I was your baby mama and that I was outside in the car with another man. I had to get out and show you it was really me, and you just laughed and said, “Oh, I'm sorry... my bad, but I already called the cops.” Meanwhile, I'm standing there trying to explain to them I don't even have a child. It was crazy at the time, but somehow it brought us closer, and from that point on we were cool.

And from then on, you always looked out for me. I'll never forget you standing across the street while I waited for the bus at 4:37am, making sure I was safe. That meant more to me than I ever told you.

I'm really going to miss you, Alvin. Thank you for being kind to me. Rest peacefully.

“ To my Irish twin. You know I am not good with words but I know right now my heart hurts. It took me days to accept that you aren't here anymore. I want you to know I love you and promise to help Kim take care of Jay'tianna. I promise to love her and spoil her like Bubba and Jarius. Tell mama, daddy, granny, Madea, Barbra and Aunt Ann. I said hello and I can't wait to see you again. I'm expecting you to be there to greet me when it's my time. Rest easy little brother. I love you for eternity!
