“ Grandma,

It's so hard to believe that you are no longer here with us here in the physical world. While my heart weighs heavy, I know that you are right where you want to be. You are one of the strongest women I know, both emotionally and spiritually. I thank you Grandma for teaching me how to love unconditionally and without boundaries. I thank you for teaching me early on in life the importance of knowing our Lord and Savior. I thank you for teaching me how to be a strong woman, a loving wife, an understanding mother and to befriend all of God's children. I will carry these 32 years of life lessons that you instilled in me and I will continue to let everything that you taught us shine through me. I know that you are with dad and grandpa right now and I can just see you smile from ear to ear. This is it Grandma! You made it! You faught so hard in life to be right where you are right now. I love you and putting my heavy heart aside - I have to say, I am so happy for you! I am at peace and comforted knowing that you don't have to fight and struggle through the day. I love you and I will miss you every day of the rest of my life! Please give dad and grandpa a BIG HUG and KISS from me and when its my time and God calls me home, I will be ecstatic to see all three of your faces!

*Love YOUR PRECIOUS,
