“ Jackie and Jessica, even though the pain you feel now is beyond measure know that your mom's love will carry you through these dark days. God will give you comfort when you think you can't seem to feel anything but hurt. He will give you peace when your mind is racing with should haves and ifs. Above all He will give you the understanding that even though He called your mom home, He gave her to you long enough to make an indelible mark on your heart. She will always be with you and the family. My prayers are with you and I am here for you.

My dear sweet sister, I am going to miss you so much. Our family has gone through so much these last 18 months. Natalie was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer in February, then in June I was diagnosed with breast cancer & then earlier this year Jerald was diagnosed with brain & lung cancer. He never complained because he didn't want the family to worry about him. Ten short days of diagnoses & he passed away. I know our Lord only gives us what he knows we can handle. I was not always able to be with my sister because of my chemo & radiation treatments. But, I will remember her always. I remember that when I did see her I would get in the bed with her & we would take a nap together. My heart breaks just thinking about our short time together. Natalie, I promise you that your little children will be taken of. I love you my dear sister!

I looked around his garden and found an empty place.
Then looked down upon the earth and saw your tired face
He put his arms around you and lifted you to rest.
"His garden must be beautiful."
Always takes the best
now you were suffering
now you were in pain
now that you would never get well on earth again
now the road was getting rough
the hills were hard to climb
I saw your weary eyelids and whispered-Peace, be this like our hearts to loose you but you didn't go alone of an arm with you the day God called you home.
