“ I met Pete Curry in June, 1966, when I joined LTV Aerospace as a young Avionics Systems Engineer. Pete was the lead engineer in our small group of five or six people. He gave me a friendly welcome and spent some valuable time getting me oriented to the work. I remember him as a gentle, polite soul with an open mind and strong ethics. He didn't tout his vast knowledge of flight control systems, but was always willing to share the knowledge. Over the years, I moved on, but I believe that Pete Curry was one of the bedrock engineers for LTV Aerospace and its successor companies. building great aircraft for the US Navy and Air Force.
