“ For the past week, I have been trying to get used to the idea of associating you with the past tense. It just doesn't feel real. On the Fourth of July we were swimming in my mother's pool as a family. When I noticed we were wearing the same color of finger nail polish and showed you, we high-fived each other. We played volley ball and continued to high five each other after each point we made. Then we watched fireworks on a downtown rooftop.

It was about two weeks ago that Steve and I rode out bicycles over to your new place. We swam and barbecued after watching the U.S. women's team win the FIFA Cup. It was the second barbeque and swim for us that week there. I was so happy you lived so close, only a few minutes from my house. I was looking forward to the summer and so excited that we were becoming such good friends so quickly. We had so much in common and each time we conversed, we kept finding out more and more. We would ask the same question at the same time, or text each other at the same moment. I knew we would be such good friends...

Unfortunately, we all have to go on now without you. I pray for your children, Ian and Ava, who you told me all about and always brought up when we gathered. I know you missed them and loved them immensely. As unconscionable as this passing is, I have faith that all wounds will heal and we we will find peace in this time of struggle.

We love you and miss you, Trinity. I thought you were going to be my new sister.

“ Trinity and I had the same black Flojos. I can't even look at mine now without thinking of her. She kept holding my daughter's hand on the Fourth of July, wanting her to swim and be a part of the action. I have re-played every exchange she and I had over the last month and I remember her telling me how proud she was of Ian when he broke his arm and didn't even cry. She loved her kids and was so proud of them. We had a swim party/bbq at her house and she made the best potato salad I've ever had in my whole life. Trinity was sweet and soft-spoken and had that slow, southern drawl that made her stand out. She was a blessing to our family and we will miss her so much, especially, of course, my brother. Her absence is heavy.

“ Dear Family of Trinity, Susan Adair and myself met Trinity just recently when she called on our store as a sales rep. For the short time that we have known her, she was a blessing to be around. She was always very positive and upbeat. Last week she was in our store helping us finalize an order we had placed with her and to drop off samples to us. She was always a joy to be around. She was so excited about her job and the work she was doing. Every time we met with her or had contact with her via emails or phone calls she was awesome and full of joy. We are very saddened by your loss and regret that we could not have know her longer.

Blessings,

“ To the family of your precious Trinity, we had the honor of knowing her and are better people for that. Trinity always greeted us with a smile and such graciously in the remodel of our home in Galveston, Tx. We are still in shock...but we know she is in the arms of the angels and at peace. Prayers for the children and the rest of Trinity's family. May the Lord give you peace and know she touched alot of lives. Trinity will be missed.

“ I first met Trin in the fall of 1997. She was dating Eric at the time and they were very happy. The memory of her I hold most dear is the memory of us all going out to the Steilacoom Pub to celebrate Eric and graduating a military course. Trin and I spent the whole night drinking Alaskan Oatmeal Amber beer and playing pool. I was married to my ex who did not drink, so she was our DD. I remember Trin trying so hard to help her have fun and relax lol. In the end my ex was a lost cause. Trin came over to me and said "Aaron.....I'm sorry, you want another beer?" On the drive home my ex was being cruel and driving erratic with the heat on full blast. Eric, Trin, and I all got sick on that ride home. As we dropped them off Trin looked at me and with a sheepish grin said "No offense, but your wife sucks!" Lol.

A few months later she would say the exact same words to me after my ex left me. She was my support to get through it.

We have cried on each other's shoulder and spoke our darkest fears to each other. Even now I can't bring myself to think she's gone. I will miss her the rest of my days.
